ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

To the members of his thesis committee at Indiana State Teachers College, Dean Weng, chairman, Dr. Jones, and Dr. Shannon, the writer expresses grateful appreciation of and thanks for suggestions, counsel, and encouragement.

The generosity of Robert K. Devricks, Registrar, and his staff in opening the office files of the Indiana State Teachers College to the writer's clerks proved invaluable.

The Rose Polytechnic Institute's aid in a study of their residence hall for men students, the deans of men in the colleges and universities of the state of Indiana who responded to the writer's letters, and the men students of the Indiana State Teachers College who kindly responded to the writer's questionnaires and interviews gave assistance without which the study could not well have continued.

I. INTRODUCTION

A. Studies on the Housing of Men Students

This study is the first of its nature to be made by any graduate student at the Indiana State Teachers College, Terre Haute, Indiana. In fact, diligent search for references in both the Indiana State Teachers College Library and the Emeline Fairbanks Memorial Library to studies on the housing of men students as a specific subject in itself at any college or university in the United States revealed a vast scarcity of such studies. Therefore, the writer has been caused to believe that the present study is a pioneer investigation of the housing of men students as a specific subject in itself.

Teacher training institutions are filled with students seeking preparation for the profession of teaching and, incidentally, for other professions. Their intellectual, physical, and social needs must be satisfied, and such satisfaction must be provided economically. Women students at colleges and universities in the United States have been treated abundantly in magazine articles, theses, and books, but men students evidently have been considered as not necessitating investigation, perhaps "...a natural result of the general belief that a young man can take care of himself."

There is another suggestion of merit that may explain the attitude towards men students and their housing. A recent survey by the United States government showed that in land-grant colleges 4.8 per cent. of the colleges' total outlay of $427,005,366 was invested in dormitories. In forty-four of the institutions examined with a total enrollment of 136,000 students, the number living in dormitories was 21,000, or 15 per cent. of the entire student body. Out of the total number of students residing in dormitories at the colleges 13,000 were men and 8,000 were women, indicating that more facilities were supplied for the housing of men students than for women students, with the evident result that at the present time the emphasis is being placed on providing more facilities for the housing of women students.

B. Need for the Study

There is definite need for such a study as the present one. First, there have been few specific studies, as far as the writer could discern, of a number of the various factors involved in the housing of men students. Second, housing has certain influences on comfort, health, study, activities, and scholastic achievement of men students. The present study is believed to show to some extent the effect of the housing on the above mentioned factors at the Indiana State Teachers College.

Of special interest to this college is the relation between scholastic achievement and the various other factors of student life. The study of the housing of men students should aid in this to the extent of providing evidence of the best type of housing for the best college scholastic achievement.

The study was suggested by Dr. Jones, Dean of the Faculty, Indiana State Teachers College, because of the desire on his part to ascertain the attitude of the men students rooming in Terre Haute, Indiana, toward a residence hall for men students, and also to find out if there were any conditions of housing that might be brought to light that would be evidence of the need for such a residence hall.

C. Purposes of the Study

The main purposes of the study are: first, to provide facts relating to the housing of men students at the Indiana State Teachers College that may be of value to this institution's administrative officers; second, to survey and compare certain other higher educational institutions in Indiana in regard to their administration of the housing of men students at the respective institutions, including the use of supplementary printed forms; third, to determine, if possible, the need of a men's residence hall at the Indiana State Teachers College.
D. The Factors Studied

The following housing and achievement factors were studied and measured as described later:

1. Academic achievement
2. Comfort beyond provision of necessities
3. The economic problem
4. Health
5. Estimated hours of study per week
6. Existence of hygienic conditions
7. Employment outside of school hours
8. Provision of commonly accepted necessities
9. Social experiences and problems

E. General Methods Used in This Study

The data in this study were obtained by questionnaires, by interviews, by observations, by visits, by letters, from college records, and from college catalogs.

1. Questionnaires. Questionnaires were sent to approximately 135 men students rooming in Terre Haute. These questionnaires were of the form shown in division "B" of the appendix.

The writer believes that the following quotation expresses to a large extent his reasons for using questionnaires in this study.
"The disadvantages of the questionnaire method are well known--failure of a large per cent. to answer the questions, failure to answer them accurately, misinterpretation of the questions, and false representation of facts. These disadvantages become less important in proportion to the care with which the questions are formulated, and to the intelligence and cooperation of the person questioned.

"The advantages are not so numerous, but two of them are quite outstanding and justify the use of this method...One is the opportunity which the questionnaire offers for thoughtful, well-considered replies. The other is that it is possible to secure information from a large number of cases more readily by this method than by any other.

"Interviews and conferences give opportunity to make necessary explanations, to correct misunderstandings, and to face situations squarely, but they are not entirely free from the disadvantages of the questionnaire. In the preparation of this study interviews and conferences frequently supplemented the questionnaire, but never displaced it. Observation and visits have afforded additional data and were most valuable."

2. Interviews. The caretakers of the Rose Polytechnic Institute's residence hall for men students, namely, Deming Hall, were interviewed in order to obtain information for the second chapter.

The visit to the residence hall at the Rose Polytechnic Institute presented a typical modern residence hall for men students.

4. Letters. The writer mailed letters to the deans of men in various educational institutions in Indiana requesting information concerning the housing of men students at the respective colleges and universities, and also requesting any printed forms that were used in the administration of the housing.

5. College Records. College records in the offices of the Dean of Men and the Registrar furnished the following data:

a. The total accumulated "F" and "D" grades given to men students enrolled in the spring quarter, 1932, up to and including the spring quarter, 1933.

b. The "F" and "D" grades given to men students during the spring quarter, 1932.

c. The absences for illness and days contained therein for men students during the spring quarter, 1932.

d. Names and addresses of men students enrolled in the college during the spring quarter, 1932.

e. List of rooming house addresses, names of men students in same, names of landladies, and cost of rooms for the spring quarter, 1933.

f. List of fraternity addresses, names of men students in same, and cost of rooms for the spring quarter, 1933.

g. List of outside employment carried by men students during the spring quarter, 1932, as well as similar lists for both first and second summer terms, 1931, fall and winter quarters, 1932, and winter quarter, 1933.
6. College Catalogs. Volume XXV, no. 4, and volume XXVI, no. 3, of the Indiana State Teachers College Bulletin were consulted by the writer for certain items of information.

Catalogs of certain Indiana colleges and universities were consulted by the writer for information concerning the housing of the men students in the respective institutions.
II. HOUSING OF MEN STUDENTS AT OTHER EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS IN INDIANA

A. Methods of Securing Information

1. Letters. Letters requesting information and printed forms concerning approved rooming houses and residence halls for men students were mailed to the deans of men at the following schools in Indiana: Ball State Teachers College, Butler University, DePauw University, Indiana University, the University of Notre Dame, and Purdue University. Ball State Teachers College, Muncie, did not answer the writer's request; the rest sent abundant information, booklets, and printed forms concerning the housing of the men students at the respective schools.

2. Bulletins. Information concerning Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, and Franklin College, Franklin, as well as additional information concerning DePauw University and the Rose Polytechnic Institute, was obtained from bulletins in the Emeline Fairbanks Memorial Library.

3. Inspection. The writer made a personal inspection of the Rose Polytechnic Institute's residence hall for men students.
B. Housing of Men Students at Butler University

Division "C" of the appendix contains a letter received from A. D. Beeler, chairman of the Men's Council, Butler University, Indianapolis, that is self-explanatory.

C. Housing of Men Students at DePauw University

DePauw University, Greencastle, requires that all men not arranging to live in fraternity houses must live in either Longden Hall, Florence Hall, or the university cottages unless they are permitted by the administration committee, upon recommendation of the Dean of Men to take rooms in private homes. Students are required to live in approved houses. All rooms for men are under the supervision of the Dean of Men and are listed in his office in the Administration Building.

The list of approved rooming houses for 1932-33 at DePauw University included 48 houses. These houses could provide quarters for a total capacity of 232 men students. There were 22 single rooms, and 106 double rooms offered, and also 3 rooms for either single or double occupancy, a total of 131 rooms.

In private homes the average price for a single room was $2.54; the most frequent actual price was $2.50. The average price for each student in a double room was $1.83; the most frequent price was $2.50; the next most frequent price was $2.00.

The list of approved rooming houses at DePauw University gives only two houses without phone, or approximately 4 percent.

The regulations for men students rooming in private homes include the following:

1. When a student signs the official rental contract, he has contracted for a room for a semester.

2. The student may not be released from the contract, except by permission of the householder or the Dean of Men.

3. Pay shall be for full time for vacations of less than a week, and such rates as may be agreed upon in the contract for vacations of a week or more.

4. Quiet hours are supposed to be maintained after 7:30 every night except Saturday night and after 11:00 on this night.

5. Students are expected to conduct themselves in rooming houses as they would in their own homes.

6. No guest shall be lodged in student rooms at any time without the knowledge and consent of the householder.

The householder is supposed to abide by the following regulations:

1. No woman roomers may live in the house.

2. Not more than two persons may sleep in the same room except by special permission.

3. Only student roomers shall occupy the same room.

4. One light shall be provided for each student in each room. If an electric light is used, at least a 40-watt light shall be provided for each student.

5. The room, bedding, furniture, bath room, and utilities furnished by the house shall be kept clean and sanitary.
The householder must agree:

1. To cooperate with the university in all matters pertaining to scholarship, to cooperate with the Dean of Men in all regulations pertaining to the conduct of young men and to report immediately to his office any case of flagrant misconduct.

2. To report to the Dean of Men all cases of serious illness or of withdraw from the university.

3. To see that the house is sufficiently quiet for study.

4. To provide all accommodations as specified on the card which she has filed in the office of the Dean of Men.

5. To notify the Dean of Men as soon as her rooms are rented.

Division "D" of the appendix contains a printed form that is filled out by householders providing for men students before the regular semester. This division also contains a printed application form that is filled out by men students desiring to room.

In selecting rooms, men students at DePauw University are advised to look for the following things:

1. Convenient size

2. At least one window for each occupant

3. Ample closet space

4. Temperature. Make sure rooms will be comfortable in winter.

5. Lighting. One properly located 40-watt light for each student.

6. Comfortable bed and good bedding.

7. Study table, bookcase, dresser, chairs, etc.

8. Accessibility, equipment, and condition of bath room.
DePauw University provides and operates halls of residence, steam heated, electric lighted, supplied with all modern conveniences, and sanitary in every respect. The rooms are furnished with rug, dresser, bed, mattress and pillow, study table, chairs, and window shade. The occupants of rooms must furnish their own towels, sheets, pillow slips, blankets, bedspread, and curtains.

Florence Hall (1891) accommodates 77 men, in most cases two men in a room. There is a two-story sleeping porch off the south side of this building.

Longden Hall (1927) is a modern fire-proof residence which accommodates 117 men. The rooms, with few exceptions, are double but are furnished with single beds. The dining room is of such proportions as to accommodate comfortably all of the men in both of the halls, as well as many of those who room off the campus. Occupants of the halls must take their meals there, unless excused by special permission.

Both Florence and Longden Halls are located three blocks south of the main campus.

Locust Street House, located immediately adjacent to Longden Hall is a frame residence accommodating 12 men. This residence was renovated and improved in 1932 and provides a limited number of rooms at a low rate. Occupants of this house must take their meals in the Longden Hall dining room unless excused by special permission.
Chestnut Street Cottage, also located near Longden Hall, provides accommodations for eight men at a low rate. Occupants of this house also must take their meals in the Longden Hall dining room unless excused by special permission.

Johnson House, providing accommodations for thirty men, is a frame residence located about two blocks north of the main campus. This residence was a gift and was completely remodeled and adapted to dormitory purposes in 1932. Men living in this residence may take their meals in the dining room at Longden Hall or elsewhere as they desire.

In addition to the houses of residence owned by the university, there are 14 fraternity houses for men as well as many private residences in which men may find accommodation.

D. Housing of Men Students at Franklin College

There are no dormitories at Franklin College, Franklin, for men students. The various fraternities maintain houses in which their own members are lodged and boarded. Non-fraternity men find lodging and board in private homes in the city at reasonable rates. Room rent varies from $2 to $3 per week (heat and light included). Board may be had from $4 to $6 per week. Lists of rooms and boarding places are on file in the Bursar's office.
E. Housing of Men Students at Indiana University

The official list of approved rooms at Indiana University, Bloomington, for the fall and spring semesters of 1932-33 includes 255 private homes, providing 459 rooms for a comfortable capacity of 819 men. Of these rooms, 97, or approximately 21 per cent., are listed for single occupancy; 318, or 69 per cent., for double occupancy; 43, or 9 per cent., for either single or double occupancy; and one room is listed for triple occupancy.

It is interesting to note that only 11, or approximately 4.8 per cent., of these private homes did not have telephones.

The average distance of approved rooms from the campus of Indiana University is three blocks. The closest rooming houses for men students are adjoining the campus; only eight approved rooming houses for men students adjoin the campus. Table III shows the distribution by blocks of the various rooming houses from the campus of Indiana University.

The official rental contract of Indiana University is signed in duplicate, one copy for the student and one copy for the landlady. Certain regulations for the men students, and certain agreements for the landladies are on this contract.

The regulations for men students specify that unmarried students may not live in apartments except with special permission. The signing of the official rental contract requires the student to remain in a room for a full semester or summer session unless, (1) the officials feel that it is to the best interest of the student's health or scholarship for that student to move; (2) the landlady has not kept her agreement; (3) the student provides an acceptable substitute; (4) the student is pledged after signing the official rental contract and prior to midnight before the first day of registration;

(5) the University Dormitory Committee reserves the privilege of transferring freshmen students into the residence hall, namely, South Hall.

The landlady's agreement specifies that she will cooperate with the university in all matters pertaining to scholarship, with the officials on approved rooms in all regulations pertaining to the conduct of young men, and to report immediately all cases of serious illness or flagrant misconduct. She is to have the rooms open at all times for inspection and must agree to certain university regulations:

1. That no woman roomers or light housekeepers shall live in the house.

2. Not more than two men may sleep in one room except in an approved dormitory ward.

3. Only student roomers shall occupy the same room.

4. To provide at least one 50-watt electric light for each student in each room.

5. To keep the room, bedding, furniture, bath room, and all utilities furnished by the house, clean and sanitary, changing bed linens at least once a week.

One landlady in Bloomington, Indiana, informed the writer that the house had been deliberately built in order to provide for students besides the immediate family. The writer believes that this is fairly common policy when new houses are built in Bloomington.

Boarding clubs are common sights in Bloomington. Meals eaten by the writer at such clubs seemed good in the majority of cases. However, at one club flies were very bothersome in early fall.

One landlady informed the writer that she had not followed the rules regarding the number of men in rooms during a certain summer session of the school. The regulations concerning quiet hours, in the writer's experience, were merely suggestions that may never be read by either landlady or student; likewise, with several of the other regulations. The writer has known students to refuse to sign the official contracts with the landladies that the university requires. Various rooming houses visited by the writer seemed to be taken care of properly by the landladies.

In connection with the list of approved rooms mentioned before, C. E. Edmonson, Dean of Men, Indiana University, wrote, "The prices have been reduced this present year."

South Hall is the men's residence hall at Indiana University, and is located opposite the campus. This building was opened with the fall semester of 1924. It is fireproof, built of concrete and Bedford limestone. The rooms are heated by steam, and lighted by electricity, having a top light and a side plug. Furnishings include a large study table, chairs, a place for books, bed and mattress, dresser and mirror. Bedding to the amount of linen, pillow, one blanket, and pad are furnished and laundered.

Students living in the men's residence hall must carry at least ten hours of university work, and are under the social direction of the Hostess.

In May, 1930, the University Dormitory Committee adopted an official ruling that "The University Dormitory Committee reserves the privilege of transferring freshmen students into a Hall of Residence, the said student being released from payment of room rent or board for the rest of the semester in his former residence." In May, 1931, this committee also adopted the ruling that, "Except in University Dormitories, contracts for rooms will not become effective until midnight before the first day of registration. This applies only to students who are pledged to social organizations." Under such favorable rulings South Hall should not experience difficulty in keeping its 55 rooms occupied.

F. Housing of Men Students at the University of Notre Dame

The University of Notre Dame, South Bend, has thirteen residence halls. Of this number, Sorin, Corby, Walsh, St.
Edward's and Badin Halls are large, well-appointed buildings, accommodating from 125 to 175 students each. Each has its own chapel, where the students may hear Mass and receive Communion daily. All rooms have running hot and cold water, electricity, and steam heat, and there are showers on each floor. Howard Hall, opened in September, 1925, has, in addition to these facilities, two convenient lounges for the recreation of its students. Morrissey and Lyons Halls will accommodate 250 and 150 students respectively. Alumni and Dillon Halls, opened in October, 1931, are beautiful new gothic structures of most modern, fire-proof construction. The former will accommodate 211 and the latter 266 men students. Brownson and Carroll Halls are located in the wings of the Administration Building, and are conducted under the common-room system, with dormitories and study halls. Freshman Hall is a two-story frame building erected some years ago as an emergency measure to meet the demand for more rooms on the campus. Although temporary in character, it furnishes comfortable living quarters.

G. Housing of Men Students at Purdue University

Purdue University, Lafayette, is provided with two modern residence halls for its men students. Franklin Levering Cary Memorial Hall, East, which was opened in September, 1928, accommodates 157 men in 129 rooms for single occupants, two double rooms, and the 12 corner rooms designed for two occupants each. Franklin Levering Cary Memorial Hall, North, was opened in February, 1931, and accommodates 116 men in 92 single rooms and in 12 double rooms.

The residence halls are attractive three-story, fire-proof buildings of brick and stone built upon a site given by the university. Next to the northwest corner of the main campus, they are very conveniently situated for men's residence halls. Student rooms are furnished in a comfortable and sturdy style with equipment consisting of a single bed with mattress and pillow, a chiffonier, a study table with bookshelves, a straight chair, an arm chair, a rug, a study lamp, and a wastepaper basket for each occupant. No personally owned furniture is permitted in any of the rooms except with the written permission of the Residence Hall Manager. Pictures and pennants are supposed to be fastened to the wood molding and not to the plaster walls. Sheets and pillow cases are furnished and laundered by the university. The residents are expected to furnish their own blankets, towels, soap, and other personal supplies.

The over-all size of beds is 36" x 78". Bedding which cannot be handled conveniently by the room servants may not be used.

Each building is equipped with its own dining rooms, modern kitchen, trunk room, and service space on the ground floor. Lounges on the first and ground floor of each building offer means of congregating and places to entertain visitors and guests. The manager's suite and office, a woman's reception room, and a guest bedroom are also on the main floor of each building.

Breakfasts are served in cafeteria style, but the luncheons and dinners are served to the entire group at one time. Dinners are somewhat formal, with upperclassmen as hosts at each table. Good manners and pleasantness are expected to be evident at all times in the dining room.
An assistant to the Residence Hall Manager, known as the faculty sponsor, lives within each building and gives counsel and help in promoting such social, athletic, and self-governing organizations as the group may wish to have.

An office attendant is on duty during the day to give information, to handle telephone calls, and to give such services and attention to the needs of the residents as are necessary.

The Cary Hall residents have formed an organization known as Cary Club. The following definite rules have been made:

1. Drinking or the possession of intoxicating liquor in the hall or drunkenness of residents, is not tolerated.

2. Gambling of any sort is prohibited.

3. Quiet hours for study are enforced from 7:30 P.M. until 7:00 A.M. except on Saturday.

4. Coats and ties will be worn at the evening meal.

5. Grace will be said before the evening meal.

6. No resident of Cary Hall may pledge to a fraternity during his first semester at the University. After completing one semester of residence at Purdue University, residents may pledge; but the council of Cary Club insists that the obligations of all Cary Hall residents to Cary Club be not lessened or superseded by affiliations with other campus organizations.

7. The possession of firearms in Cary Hall is prohibited. The owner of any firearm will leave it with the faculty sponsor upon arrival and will take it out only for use outside of the city limits.

8. Radios may be used in student rooms only after permission is obtained from the faculty sponsors and only if they are so used as not to annoy other residents.
All residents of the residence halls are expected to take their meals in the Hall dining rooms. The charge for residence in the Hall for the academic year is $405.00, which may be budgeted as $150 for room and $255.00 for board.

For parents, friends, and other guests of the residents, the cost of a private room and bath is $2.00 per night, sleeping accommodations for not more than three consecutive nights, 75¢ per night. Breakfast is 35¢, lunch 40¢, and dinner 50¢.

In order to give preference to freshmen and yet afford a somewhat permanent student house organization, the apportionment by classes in the assignment of rooms is: freshmen, not less than 150; sophomores, 60; juniors, 35; and seniors, 25.

The contracts for the rental of the rooms are for the entire university year and the university does not permit any one to move from Cary Hall to a fraternity or other club house during the period of the contract.

The university publishes a booklet called, "Suggestions for Students and Housekeepers in Private Residences." In the matter of the occupancy of rooms in private residences by students and in the renting of rooms to students by housekeepers, the university believes that in most instances a written legal contract is impracticable. The above mentioned booklet contains some suggestions, however, as to certain conditions and understandings that the university feels ought to prevail.

The general understandings are:
1. The University reserves the right to authorize the removal of a student from any room when such removal is considered to be essential to the student's best interest.

2. A fully equipped room should have the following:
   a. 1 study table per student
   b. 1 straight back chair per student
   c. 1 waste basket per student
   d. 1 easy chair or rocker
   e. 1 50-watt center lamp
   f. 1 30-watt lamp, for shaving, in bathroom
   g. 1 floor rug
   h. 1 bed and equipment

3. No guest will be lodged in a student's room at any time without the knowledge and consent of both the house-keeper and the student renting the room.

4. The student should practice economy by turning off light, gas, and water when not in use. He should keep his books and papers in order. Articles of clothing should be kept in wardrobe and dresser.

5. A student should not keep money and valuables in his room and expect to hold the householder responsible for losses.

6. Any special agreements are supposed to be noted on the back of the folder.

On the part of the student it is understood that:

1. The rent is payable in advance and on a monthly basis.

2. When a written lease or agreement exists either party has legal recourse and the University will not undertake to settle differences.

3. In case a move is made without thirty days' notice, or without mutual agreement of the student and housekeeper, or without specific approval of the Dean of Men, the student shall be liable, in the absence of any formal lease or written agreement, for the payment of an additional month's rent, dating from the time of such removal, or date of giving notice. Rents are not to be paid past the end of the semester, unless the student expects to remain in the room.
4. Any evidence of the possession or use of intoxicating liquor will be reported to the Dean of Men by the housekeeper. No gambling will be engaged in in the house; and profane and vulgar language will not be used.

5. Quiet hours will be maintained after 7:30 P. M. every night except Saturday night, and after 10:00 P. M. on that night. Sunday should be a quiet day. During these quiet periods there should be no loud talking in rooms or halls, and no use of musical instruments in a manner disturbing to other occupants of the house.

6. There will be no disorder in room or halls at any time. "Roughhousing" is distinctly out of order.

7. If smoking is permitted, the student will assume responsibility for any damage resulting therefrom.

8. A student will be liable for any damage done to his room, or dormitory, or its furnishings, other than that due to ordinary wear. Where two or more students occupy a room or dormitory each shall be liable for a proportionate amount of the damage, unless it is voluntarily assumed by one or more of the occupants, or is assessed against a particular occupant.

9. Electrical appliances will not be used without special arrangement with the housekeeper.

On the part of the housekeeper it is understood that:

1. Rooms will be put in order each day, and will be thoroughly cleaned and have the linens changed every week.

2. Hot and cold water will be available at all times, unless special arrangements are made to the contrary.

3. Sufficient heat will be furnished to keep the room comfortably warm from 7:00 A. M. to 11:00 P. M. at all seasons.

4. Rooms will be accessible to the students at all hours, and to visitors until 10:30 P. M.
5. When a student is too ill to attend classes, or is called home suddenly, the housekeeper will notify the office of the Dean of Men.

6. If it is desired to have the student vacate his room, a reasonable time will be allowed to find another place, and a refund of the unused room rent will be made. In extraordinary cases he may be required to move at once. The reason for requesting the student to move is to be reported to the Dean of Men.

7. Quartering more than two students in a room is not looked upon by the University as providing satisfactory working conditions. Also, the University does not approve of a student living in a room with a person who is not enrolled as a member of the University.

8. Children of the householder will not be allowed to visit students' rooms. Roomers, other than students, and members of the householder's family will not be allowed to become distracting influences.

H. Housing of Men Students at Rose Polytechnic Institute

The writer made a personal inspection of the residence hall because he desired to ascertain what features of this hall could be appropriately incorporated in a residence hall for men students at the Indiana State Teachers College, provided that such hall were built there.

The topography of the grounds of the Rose Polytechnic Institute is varied and of great natural beauty. Rolling tableland includes two small lakes, meadows and wooded hills. Lost Creek separates the athletic field from the main campus. A short distance from the main building on a ridge overlooking the lake and athletic field is the Demis and Sarah C. Deming Memori-Dormitory, built in 1926.

Accommodations for 52 students are provided comfortably in Deming Hall by 32 rooms. First year students not living at home are required to room in the dormitory.

A large social room is provided on the ground floor, containing a radio, cases of books, pictures, and furniture. Its hardwood floor is the only wooden floor in the building, all others being concrete. Dances are held on this floor by the members of the residence hall at various times.

Each single room provides a closet, dresser, bookshelf, single bed and mattress, rug, curtains, curtains to closet, spittoon, waste-paper basket, bed linen and one blanket, and a chair. Single rooms have single windows, approximately four feet by five feet. Small adjustable ventilators are provided in the doors of the rooms. Double floor plugs are provided for reading lamp and radio and one ceiling light fixture containing a 50-watt bulb. The study lamp is furnished also with the same wattage.

Double rooms are provided with two closets, dressers, bookshelves, beds and mattresses, curtains, spittoons, waste-paper baskets, bed linen, blankets, and chairs. Most of these double rooms have double windows, but corner double rooms have one double window, and an additional single window.

The bed linen is changed once a week. The rooms are dusted and swept daily. Screens are provided on the windows. The rooms are said to be cool in summer, the residence hall being upon somewhat high ground. In winter the rooms are heated by steam.
The bath rooms are on the first and second floors. They contain showers, drying rooms, toilets and urinals, drinking fountains, wash bowls, and a mirror to each bowl.

The basement contains a laundry room for students desiring to wash small articles of clothing. There is also the cafeteria, which is modern in every respect, being self-serving. Students are expected to eat in the cafeteria. Board in the residence hall provides breakfast and dinner from Monday to Friday, inclusive, and three meals on Saturday and Sunday.

Ice water is provided in the hall drinking fountains and in the cafeteria. Electric ranges are used in the kitchen, power being provided by the school plant.

The building is strictly fireproof. Chemical fire extinguishers are provided in the halls. The floors are of concrete construction and the stairways of steel and concrete, the one exception being the social room's floor, which as mentioned above is hardwood.

Residence hall rates for room and board for the school year are $280, $300, and $320, respectively, according to the type of room in which the student desires to stay.

The one objection to the residence hall is possibly the noise factor. The writer was informed that seven radios during the spring have been in use in certain rooms occupied by the students. This makes a total of eight radios, including the one in the social room. The writer does not know whether or not the caretakers, who live in a suite in the residence hall, have a radio of their own.

Quiet hours, to be sure, are observed during the week days, but even then one may make inference that there is to some extent interference with proper study because of the large number of radios.

In all other respects the residence hall seemed strictly what an ideal home for a group of men students should be. The surroundings are beautifully landscaped, and a tennis court owned by the college provides needed recreation, as well as the near-by lake which is used for swimming.

I. Housing of Men Students at Valparaiso University

The men's residence hall at Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, is Lembke Hall. It is a spacious structure with two wings, North and South Lembke, and is set aside principally for freshman students. Other college men also may elect to live there. Its accommodations include parlor, clubrooms, some rooms for single students, and a large number of two-room suites for two students. The rooms are furnished, with the exception of curtains, towels, pillows and bedding. All freshmen, except those who live with their parents or guardians, are required to live in Lembke Hall.

Besides Lembke Hall, additional quarters for men may be secured in homes near the university, provided they are on the approved list which is kept on file in the office of the Dean of Students.

J. Summary of Housing of Men Students at Other Educational Institutions in Indiana

Of the eight schools considered by the writer in the second chapter, DePauw University, Indiana University, the University of Notre Dame, Purdue University, Rose Polytechnic Institute, and Valparaiso University provide residence halls for their respective men students. Butler University and Franklin College do not own men's residence halls. All men students at the University of Notre Dame stay in the residence halls of this institution, but Indiana University, Purdue University, Rose Polytechnic Institute and Valparaiso University have provided their residence halls principally for freshmen, although accepting the other class men.

Lists of approved rooming houses appear to be kept at all schools studied, with the exceptions of Butler University, the University of Notre Dame, and Rose Polytechnic Institute.
III. HOUSING OF MEN STUDENTS, INDIANA
STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE

A. Orientation

The campus of the Indiana State Teachers College is located in the heart of Terre Haute, a city of approximately sixty thousand in population, being within two blocks of the main thoroughway, Wabash Avenue.²

As one gazes over the campus, the following facts may be noted: between Mulberry and Eagle Streets are located the Main Hall, North Hall, Training School, Union Building, and the power plant, with the Emeline Mairbanks Memorial Library and a business block to the east; on the north of Eagle Street are Science Hall, Indiana State Teachers College Library, Physical Education Building, Practice House, and a number of tennis courts adjoining the gymnasium; on the south of Mulberry Street are the Industrial Arts Building, the Women's Residence Hall, and the newly equipped bookstore.

The Union Building is the center of the social life of the student body. The various organizations of the school hold their meetings here, as well as many of the smaller receptions and entertainments. Perhaps the greatest value of the building lies in the fact that the building is kept open from morning till late evening every day as a place to study.

lounge, or visit with friends. A competent matron is engaged to keep the building orderly at all times.

The college provides for a student activities course in order to fulfill the need of a well-balanced extracurricular program of high-grade musical concerts, lectures, and other entertainments as a feature in collegiate education.

The students of the college maintain quite a number of student societies with some academic, literary, or religious significance.

The college does not maintain a formal system of student advisors. The Dean of Men, however, is glad to act as the men student's adviser in all personal matters except those relating to the selection of studies. While in special cases he is to act as student adviser for all men students in the school, he tries to serve in an especial manner as adviser to freshmen.

The college gives every encouragement to young men to find suitable employment outside of school hours to permit them to earn money with which to pay in part their expenses while in school. Not infrequently, students have combined the highest scholarship in their studies with a substantial earning power during their open periods. The placing in positions and registration of men students desiring employment is under the supervision of Mr. Harold Bright, the Director of Student Employment.

The following list gives the number of men students working outside of school during the respective terms and quarters mentioned: first summer term, 1931: 170 men working, and 59 men wanting work; second summer term, 1931: 118 men working; fall quarter, 1932: 224 men working; winter quarter, 1932: 265 men working; spring quarter, 1932: 224 men working; winter quarter, 1933: 245 men working.

Table IV, arranged in order of descending frequencies, shows the distribution by types of employment for the 245 men students working outside of school hours during the winter quarter, 1933.

Of the men students not living in Terre Haute, a large number commute home daily, either with friends, by interurban or bus, or in the family's automobile. A representative list of the various towns from which these students frequently commute would include:

- Bloomfield
- Bowling Green
- Brazil
- Carbon
- Center Point
- Clay City
- Clinton
- Cloverdale
- Cory
- Farmersburg
- Mecca
- Merom
- Montezuma

Naturally, a large number commute from various rural routes as well.

B. Suggestive Problems

A series of interviews, observations, and letters follow in order to show the reader some of the suggestive problems at the Indiana State Teachers College.

A former woman instructor of science at the Indiana State Teachers College informed the writer that certain men students in her seven o'clock class of a certain summer term appeared in class one morning very sleepy. Inquiry developed the information that the night before the fraternity house of these students had had a visit from an occupant of the rafters of the attic in which the men students slept, namely, Cimex lectularius, the common bedbug. The students said that they had spent practically the entire night fighting the bedbugs, and requested information on how to conquer the pests. One student said the fraternity probably would have to move to another house soon because of the pests, and the fraternity did move sometime later, although one can not say definitely for what reason.
One student expressed dissatisfaction with lodging at the fraternity, saying that he would not be at that fraternity next term, because he did not like to be wakened in the middle of the night by some visiting fraternity brother's persistent back-thumping and being told that this fraternity brother had been assigned to sleep with him for the night, as he never minded.

One student in answering the writer's questionnaire enclosed the following letter:

Dear Sir:

I work at a filling station and sleep there at night. I work until 10 o'clock at night. This will explain why some of the questions are difficult to answer.

Yours truly,

Another student in answering the questionnaire wrote on the back of the same the following interesting complaint:

Note: I am bothered with students using my radio and being in room. I am away of week ends and I don't like any one to be in (my) room. No rooms in house are locked, so wouldn't be (the) thing to do to lock door. Why can't fellow students respect the privileges of others?

The following interesting letter was enclosed by still another student who returned the writer's questionnaire:

Last term I was at --------. Treatment there was terrible; beds were never fixed; room was dirty; no sunlight whatever; she charged me $2.00 a week; I was annoyed by rats; she put a general (?) on her electricity, and this made my lights very poor.
Please go and see this room.

It is in terrible condition and I would advise you not to let any one room in that entire house because it is not safe for any one because of the electric wires which are running throughout the entire house.

I will gladly back up all statements which I have made. It is possible that I can make a couple hundred more.

Truly yours,

J. E. P.

These isolated incidents might suggest to the non-critical observer that housing of men students at the Indiana State Teachers College was not satisfactory. However, these incidents are fragmentary in nature, and merely are given to show what some of the conditions of housing of men students at this college have been as known to the writer; surely there have been many other such incidents that have not been brought to the writer's attention.

The writer's views and opinions, based upon the data compiled and the observations made, concerning the point as to whether the housing of men students at the Indiana State Teachers College is or is not satisfactory, will be given in the final chapter.
C. General Discussion of Rooming Houses

There is a real distinction between the typical rooming house and a home providing accommodations for one or two student roomers. As M. L. Fisher, Dean of Men, Purdue University, expressed the matter, "The average rooming house handles about four, six, or eight students. People who keep one or two students do not like to be spoken of as being rooming house keepers."3

"Residence in rooming houses is less significant from the point of view of the undergraduate body of thought than other modes of living. As the easiest arrangement for housing university men and women it is accepted and made the best of, but it is not regarded by many as a particularly happy solution. Two sorts of rooming houses may be distinguished—those which are approved and in some degree supervised by the university, and those with which the university has no connection...At those institutions where men's rooming houses are supervised by the authorities there is usually less actual control of the students than in the case of the women—a natural result of the general belief that a young man can take care of himself.

"Hundreds of students in almost every university live in unsupervised rooming houses. At most midwestern and western universities the number is very large—sometimes well over half of the entire enrollment, though usually none are women. The effects of this kind of life are difficult to generalize. There is commonly even less group feeling than in the case of a supervised house, for the latter is at least a unity from the standpoint of the university administration. Little choice is exercised in the matter of living companions except with respect to roommates.

"Much of the comfort of this sort of living depends on the lady of the house. If she takes a real interest in the men under her roof, if she makes them

3 Personal communication to the writer.
feel that her house is, temporarily at least, home, the situation leaves little to be desired. If, on the other hand, the household is the scene of dissensions between landlady and student or if the relationship is purely a business one, rooming house life has little to recommend it. Possibly the usual situation is for the student to be on amicable but not cordial terms with the family of the house. He lacks anything like home life and is thrown on his own responsibility the more. Life of this sort develops self-reliance if all goes well; there is less of the servile conformity to narrow group conventions than among house group members. But if all does not go well, it fosters irresponsibility and worse; the support which consciousness of membership in an organized group gives is absent. One has his roommate, perhaps, and others whom he knows well—possibly a group with which he eats regularly—but, after all, he has not a well established fellowship to fall back on when in trouble.

Fred H. Turner, Dean of Men, University of Illinois, in a recent article wrote as follows regarding the problems connected with rooming houses:

"Next to parent-son relationships, we have many cases come up involving students and their landladies. After a few years of dealing with them, a dean soon learns to know that there are always two sides to these troubles, and also learns that some landladies cannot get on with any students, and why this is true. I think of Mrs. X, who always comes in tears. Then there is Mrs. Y. Mrs. Y can never keep her roomers. She has a nice house, but the boys always stay a little while and then leave. The only man who ever stayed with her more than a year was a hard-boiled mining engineer, who, early in his first semester with her, told her to keep out of his room except to clean it, and to make that snappy.

"Landladies complain about a variety of things. John won't pay his rent regularly. Fred insists on having a radio, and 'I've never permitted radios.' Nathan insists on using a seventy-five-watt electric..."

bulb, when 'I never use more than a forty.' Herman is going to have to pay extra 'if he insists on bathing every day.' Mrs. A bewails the fact that her boys 'insist on having hot water every morning.' Mrs. B caught two of her boys cooking on a little electric grill in their room. Mrs. C does not know what to do with her boys, 'because they will shout out of the windows at the girls who live across the street.' Mrs. D's boys seem to 'think that the bed is a wrestling mat, and they have broken down the bed.' Mrs. E has a boy who 'just will spill tobacco ashes on the rugs, and he set the waste-basket on fire one night.' The boys come in to complain about the same things that the landladies object to. Lack of heat, lack of hot water, lack of cleanliness, annoyance from radio, piano and children downstairs. Two men have been put out of a house by the landlady, but she is holding their trunks until they pay for the rest of the month; they think they should pay only for the time that they are there.

"The rooming-house-trouble game is one of the most unsatisfactory that we have to play. It is never possible to please both of the complaining parties. If the student is pleased, the landlady complains that she has not had a fair deal; if the landlady is satisfied, the boy feels that he has been mistreated. We are convinced that some landladies are temperamentally unfit to keep student roomers. They are nervous, irritable and hard to please, and regardless of the conduct of the roomers, they are always complaining. Fortunately, there are others who have kept students year after year without the slightest trouble."

D. Specific Discussion of Rooming Houses

1. Situation. At the present time men students at the Indiana State Teachers College are not being forced to stay in approved rooming houses if they do not so desire, but are allowed to live anywhere in the city. When men students were forced to stay in approved rooms, the landladies promptly raised the price of the rooms. However, men students are requested to write in before attending school in order that approved rooms may be found by the Dean of Men that will be suitable in price, size, comforts, etc., to such students.

2. Questionnaires. The writer mailed a large number of questionnaires to the men students rooming in Terre Haute. These questionnaires consisted of two pages, containing 77 specific items that were included after conferences with various teachers at the Indiana State Teachers College. As many as possible of the items were arranged in a "Yes, No" form, in order that they might be checked with facility. These questionnaires upon return by mail were tabulated in various ways.

The study includes 90 questionnaires covering to some extent, at least, 122 men students lodging in 70 rooms in 58 different rooming houses.

3. General Tabulation. The first tabulation of the questionnaire was made of the "Yes, No" portions, the items included being from 1 to 15, inclusive, and 43 to 49, inclusive, also, items 51, 53, 55, 56, and 57. This tabulation is presented on the following page.

A fourth student leaving the space blank wrote as follows:

"Item 55--I live approximately one mile from school, which is easily walked in 15 to 20 minutes. I prefer to live a little distance from school because of the exercise derived from the walk, also to free myself from interruption while attempting to study, a common condition in some rooming houses near school. A controlled environment would be possible were a dormitory available."

Five students stated that they did not have hot water; 17 had hot water on request; 13 students said they had hot water at any time; 35 had hot water practically all of the time.

Item 66 is "About how many hours per week do you study?"

The average number of hours of study per week per student was found by the writer to approximate 24. In a study made at the Maryland State Normal School some time ago it was found that the average first year student spent 21 hours and 15 minutes per week in study while teachers estimated he should spend 2 hours and 14 minutes more, or 23 hours and 29 minutes. While the average on the writer's questionnaire exceeded the teachers' estimate, the questionnaires were from students of all class standings, not just freshmen; also, the writer used only rooming house men students, while in the study mentioned, all freshmen were used, including both men and women.

Answers to items 67 to 72, inclusive, referring to kinds of vermin that have bothered men students, were: mice: 1; roaches: 4; bedbugs: 0; flies: 4; fleas: 0; mosquitoes: 3; left blank: 78.
Answers to items 73 to 76, inclusive, referring to types of heating were: steam: 20; water: 12; hot air: 46; stove: 4; left blank: 8.

Each of the following statements by men students at the Indiana State Teachers College is either taken from separate questionnaire sheets in answer to item 77, namely, "Anything particularly attractive about either house or room;", or, is taken from evident mis-statements in answer to items 62 and 63. Item 62 was "What do you not like about the house?"; item 63 was "What do you not like about your room?". From the answers to these two items in some cases it was determinable that the "not" in one or both items had been overlooked, the resulting answer being of a positive nature and appropriate for inclusion with answers to item 77.

The writer has included a number of corrections in both punctuation and spelling, but no other changes have been made.

The statements were as follows:

Approximate sizes of rooms were: 12' x 18', 14' x 16', 18' x 18', and 20' x 30'. The corresponding areas were:
216 sq. ft., 224 sq. ft., 324 sq. ft., and 600 sq. ft.

Under items 23 to 36, inclusive, of the writer's questionnaire two rooms reported book racks; four rooms reported chairs; three reported curtains; four--dressers; two--gas ranges; two--pictures; none--phonograph; one--radio; three--rugs; four--study tables; four--closets; three--rocking chairs; four--study lamps; four--transoms.

Each of the four rooms had two beds. One room had two windows; three rooms had two windows each.

7. Rooms Providing Quadruple Occupancy. Four questionnaires were received concerning three rooms providing quadruple occupancy. These three rooms were in three separate rooming houses. Evidently eight men students were paying $1.50 each; one stated that he was working for the room, and it may be assumed that the other three students with him were also working for the room.

Under items 23 to 36, inclusive, of the writer's questionnaire on room reported book racks; three rooms reported chairs; three reported curtains; three--dressers; none--gas range; one--pictures; none--phonograph; three--closets; one--rocking chairs; three--study lamps; one--transom.

Each of the three rooms had two beds. Two rooms had three windows; one room had two windows. Type of heating was hot air in all three rooms.

The dimensions of two rooms were given, one being 10' x 18' and the other 15' x 16'; the corresponding areas are 180 sq. ft. and 240 sq. ft.
E. Specific Discussion of Fraternities

There are three fraternities at the Indiana State Teachers College that provide rooms for their non-resident members. These fraternities are Alpha Sigma Tau, Delta Lambda Sigma, and the Forum.

The fraternities do not belong to national organizations. While this is perhaps of economic advantage to the members of the local fraternities, since the dues are probably lower than they could be otherwise, certain advantages of national membership are lacking, such as the constant drive of national organizations in bettering their member chapters.

The fraternities are housed in mansions of some decades ago. The atmosphere among the roomers is quite different from that in the typical rooming house. The fraternity members possess the house, as one might say. In the typical rooming house the relation between landlady and roomers may be somewhat formal. This is often due to the large number of roomers, while in the fraternities large numbers make for companionship among all.

The roomers in the fraternities are provided for in double rooms at $1.50 per week per student. Many of these students make their living expenses, partly or wholly, by employment outside of school hours. The list for outside work during the winter quarter, 1933, shows two members of fraternity A working as follows:
1. Dance orchestra, varying time, for $1.00 per hour.
2. Selling clothes during spare time.

The list mentioned shows nine members of fraternity B working as follows:

1. Vigo Auto Co., 10 hours per week, $2.50 per day.
2. Mail messenger, 3 hours per day, for $50 per month.
3. Mail messenger, 3 hours per day, for meals.
4. Gillis Drug Co., 3 hours per day, for meals.
5. Gillis Drug Co., 5 hours per day, for meals and $3.00 per week.
6. Goodie Shop orchestra, 2 hours per day, for meals.
7. Firing furnace, 1 hour per day, for room.
8. Tribune route, 2 hours per day, for collections.
9. What the student can find, 3 hours per day.

Fraternity C was mentioned on the list 21 times, and the work as listed for the members follows:

1. Restaurant, 4 hours per day, for meals.
2. Restaurant, 3 hours per day, for meals.
3. Restaurant, 3 hours per day, for meals.
4. Walt's restaurant, 4 hours per day, for meals.
5. Bus boy at Thompson's, 3 hours per day, for meals.
6. Union Depot restaurant, 1½ hours per day, for meals.
7. Gillis Drug Co., 2 hours per day, for meals.
8. Gillis Drug Co., 4 hours per day, for meals.
9. Playing at Thompson's, 1 hour per day, for two meals per day.

10. Orchestra, 6 to 12 hours per week, for board.

11. Firing furnace, 1 hour per day, for room.

12. Firing furnace, 2 hours per day, for $1.50 per week.

13. Bookstore, 2 hours per day, for $0.40 per hour.

14. Bookstore, for $0.40 per hour.

15. Star route, 3 hours per day, for $8.00 per week.

16. Star route, 3 hours per day.

17. Tribune route, 2 hours per day, for $8.00 per week.

18. Gillis Drug Co., 3½ hours per day, for $0.25 per hour.

19. Laboratory assistant, 2 hours per day, for $18.00 per month.

20. Referee, 3 hours per week, for from $5.00 to $15.00 per game.

F. Study of Relations of Housing to Scholastic Achievement

The writer used a total of 555 men students listed as registered for the spring quarter, 1932, at the Indiana State Teachers College. These men students were divided into four housing divisions: commuting men students, fraternity men students (live in the fraternities), resident men students (live in Terre Haute), and rooming house men students. Subdivisions were made on the basis of whether or not the men students were employed.
The following tabulations were made:

1. The total accumulated "F" and "D" grades given to each of the above divisions enrolled in the spring quarter, 1932, up to and including the spring quarter, 1933.

2. The "F" and "D" grades given to men students during the spring quarter, 1932.

3. The absences for illness and days contained therein for men students during the spring quarter, 1932.

4. Preparation of percentage tables based upon the data collected.

IV. SUMMARY, CONCLUSIONS, CRITICISMS, AND SUGGESTIONS

A. Summary

In the preceding three chapters we have considered in detail that which the following paragraphs cover in outline.

1. First Chapter. We noted that there were evidently very few studies existing that dealt with the housing of men students in colleges and universities in the United States as a specific subject in itself.

There was indicated also that a definite need existed at the present time for such a study, and it was mentioned that the study had been suggested by Dr. Jones, Indiana State Teachers College, because of his expressed desire to know if there were any conditions of housing existing at the college that would be evidence of the need for a men's residence hall.

The main purposes of the study, the housing and achievement factors felt to necessitate consideration, and the general methods used by the writer, were also discussed.

2. Second Chapter. This chapter dealt with the housing of men students at certain other educational institutions in Indiana. Eight colleges and universities were considered.

3. Third Chapter. Various features of the Indiana State Teachers College were mentioned to serve as an orientation. A series of interviews, observations, and letters were given in order to acquaint the reader with some of the sugges-
B. Conclusions, Criticisms, and Suggestions

The writer showed in the second chapter that certain other educational institutions in Indiana were using printed forms supplementary to the administration of the housing of the men students. The writer wishes to recommend to the Indiana State Teachers College that to each rooming house student desiring a room at the beginning of any quarter a mimeographed list of rooming houses be given. This list should contain, besides the address of each house, the name of the landlady, the telephone number, the distance of house from the campus, the number and type of rooms for rent, and the price per occupant per room.
The writer also believes that a definite list of essential contents for rooms in rooming houses should be prepared and distributed to new men roomers so that these students may be better able to determine the worth of the various rooms that they may visit.

The writer does not favor a definite contract between landlady and student roomer, but does believe that certain regulations should be formulated for both landlady and roomer to observe.

As inspection of every rooming house during the school year is difficult, if not impossible, it is recommended that the college use questionnaires in the collection of housing material and data, and that these questionnaires be of two types, one for landlady response and one for student response.

In the third chapter a specific study of rooming houses at the Indiana State Teachers College was given. The general tabulation of the rooming houses seems to indicate that certain things need improvement. There is need of screens on the windows of a number of rooming houses. More houses need telephones, but under present difficulties the landladies can not afford the installation in all probability. There should not be a single approved rooming house without a toilet and bathtub. There are too many houses with the toilet room used by both family and roomers. A number of students are evidently not sleeping sufficiently, if one considers eight hours of sleep.
per night as sufficient. In no approved rooming house should the rooms be heated by stoves.

Although the writer does not consider the condition of the rooming houses entirely adequate, the majority of the men students listed things that they particularly liked about either their room, the rooming house, or both.

A compilation based upon items 49 to 55, inclusive, 60, 62, 63, 77, mis-statements in item 62, and mis-statements in item 63, of the writer's questionnaire, showed that the following rubrics were mentioned the most times by the students:
cleanliness, distance, light, price, and quietness. These rubrics should be the basis for approval of rooming houses on both the part of the student and the school.

A study of the grades collected by the writer for the different types of housing seems to indicate that the fraternities make the worse grades, resident students next, with commuting and rooming students about equal. Working influences the grades, making them worse. It is difficult to draw any reliable conclusions concerning either absences or days of absence.

In 1924 the Indiana State Teachers College dedicated its first large residence hall for women. A second wing to the residence hall of equal size was completed in 1929. So far, a men's residence hall has not materialized.

The writer believes that the Indiana State Teachers College should have a residence hall for its men students.

A residence hall would add to the general attractiveness of the campus, exemplify a progressive spirit, and serve a useful purpose. Other advantages of a residence hall would include the following:

1. Set a standard for rooming houses in regard to beauty, comfort, heat, light, and price.

2. Place proper supervision over study hours.

3. Might serve as a means of employment to some of the men students.

4. It is a form of living in groups, and serves a purpose in preparing the student for life after college.

5. Studies have shown that women students in dormitories make the highest scholastic averages of the various housing groups. This should hold true for men students, too.

The attitude of the men students towards a men's residence hall seems to be largely summed up in the words "reasonable rates." Approximately one-half of the students answering the writer's questionnaire indicated that they favored a dormitory for the freshmen.

The writer does not believe that a residence hall for men students at the Indiana State Teachers College necessarily must be of large size. Rooms for fifty men students might prove sufficient. The main consideration in filling the rooms is to be reasonable in the prices charged for room and board. If the college is careful in this matter of prices, there would be likely no necessity of making tenure in the residence hall compulsory for freshmen students.
VI. APPENDIX

A. Annotated Bibliography

In this study the author has placed chief reliance on his own experience as an active participant in undergraduate life and as a teacher who has studied undergraduates at close range for five years.

The study shows a thorough understanding on the part of the author of contemporary undergraduate life at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

The main purpose of the inquiry whose results are given in this volume was to obtain at first hand expressions of opinion regarding the conditions and influences affecting the character of undergraduates in twenty-three colleges and universities, both here and abroad.

The authors attempted to sound the opinion and experience of various kinds of persons regarding undergraduate life and interest, and the bearings of both the formal and informal educational processes on undergraduate character.

More than one thousand college men and women contributed to the interviews on which this book is largely based.

This thesis proved of great value to the writer, not so much for the contents as for the form.

Turner, Fred H. "All in a Dean's Day" Saturday Evening Post, GCV, No. 46, pp. 10, 11, 30, 32, and 34.

This article gives a series of interesting reminiscences concerning the duties, experiences, and tasks of a dean of undergraduates in a large university.

GENERAL INFORMATION

All rooms for men in private homes are under the supervision of the Dean of Men thru the Inspector of Men's Rooms. Rooms are listed at Dean of Men's Office, Maxwell Hall. Landladies will call his office when they desire to have rooms placed on the "Approved List."

University men are required to live in houses approved by the Dean of Men. Obtain the approved list at the Y.M.C.A. office. If you desire detailed information about any particular home, you will find it on file at the office of Dean of Men.

The landlady will present to you an official "Rental Contract" on which are listed the regulations for men, the agreement for the landlady, price, extra charges, etc. This is to be signed in duplicate, one copy for the student and one for the landlady. All men are advised to read this contract carefully and determine the suitability of the room before signing it. Your signature to this contract will obligate you to keep the room for the semester or session.

2. Remember that students are young people, immature and unsettled in their thinking, and that they have come from a great variety of homes and environments.

3. Insist on the prompt and full payment of room rent in advance. Have a clear cut understanding about telephone bills, the use of electric appliances, radios, etc. before a student moves in.

4. Rent your rooms on the basis of a calendar month. Rents should stop at end of semester and start anew with the new semester. At the end of the semester it is better to charge only for the days the student stays. Require a deposit when engaging the room. Always give a receipt. Cash checks at once.

5. The student renting your room expects light, heat, hot water, telephone, room care, comfortable equipment, freedom from interruption by children and other distractions. If you can not furnish these, there should be a very clear understanding about the arrangements.

6. Rooms on the third floor must have fire escapes. These must be approved by the Fire Marshal.

7. Profane language, drinking, crude and suggestive songs, and "rough housing" are not approved. I shall not allow students to room in a house which has become noted for the "rough-neck" character of its roomers, or causes complaints from neighbors. I am anxious to help to preserve good order but I can not reach out with a long arm into the various rooming places.
8. It is better to let the student move than to fuss with him. The other students in the house will rarely sympathize with you.

9. You should know about your students every day. If one is sick, gone out of town, or quit school you should know it.

10. Many students fail to get up in time in the morning. A well-intentioned student, whose spirit is willing but his flesh weak, ought to have some help from his landlady.

11. Try to furnish your rooms with comfortable but substantial furniture. You can not expect students to pay for the breaking of rickety and worn out furnishings.

12. Many parents, who come here with their children, or visit them, complain to me that the general condition of our rooming places is not good; the rooms need papering, the houses need painting, the lawns are poorly kept, etc.

13. If a student gets too sick to attend classes notify this office; if he is seriously ill, his parents should be informed at once. This office will notify them, if you will let us know. The student should be induced to go to the hospital. He is entitled to $20.00 worth of service in either hospital.

14. I am aware that most roominghouse keepers are sympathetic and desire to be helpful to their roomers. I am anxious to have our students appreciate this attitude and shall lend my best efforts to that end.

Dean of Men
The following letter was received by the writer from M. L. Fisher, Dean of Men, Purdue University:

April 25, 1933

Mr. William C. Selsam,
221 So. Sixth St.,
Terre Haute, Ind.

Dear Sir:

I have your request of April 24, concerning the housing of men students. At Purdue University students live under four general conditions: 1. Fraternities 2. Residence Halls 3. Private residences (rooming houses) 4. At home with parents. I take it you are familiar with fraternity housing and that that will need no explanation. Our residence halls are what are generally spoken of as dormitories but they are really something more than dormitories. Our halls furnish practically every facility a student may want: lounging rooms, baths, recreation rooms, dining halls, and opportunities for social and physical recreation. The occupants of our residence halls have dances and other social functions the same as fraternities have. The Halls are organized with student officers and quite largely self-governed. They have their own athletic teams. The cost in the residence hall is about the same as a moderate fraternity.

About sixty percent of our student body is domiciled in private residences, in which from one to twelve or fifteen men are accommodated. The average rooming house handles about four, six, or eight students. People who keep one or two students do not like to be spoken of as being roominghouse keepers. The accommodations in private residences are variable: good, bad and indifferent, with the majority probably indifferent. However, there are many good rooms available to students and relatively few that would be classed as bad. Students who room in private residences have, for the most part, all of the modern conveniences, electric lights, furnace heat, bath and toilet facilities, telephone and hot water. Rooms are equipped with student tables, chairs, usually rugs, etc. This office attempts to inspect rooming houses and see that they are in reasonable condition. Students are not allowed to room in houses unsupervised.
The majority of our unorganized students board at cafeterias and restaurants. However, this year more than usual there are many private boarding clubs. A good many students board where they room. A few students are boarding themselves, having the privilege of using a hot plate or the landlady’s kitchen. This practice has come into vogue during the present year more than heretofore.

Enclosed is some literature related to the subject of housing students.

Very truly yours,

M. L. Fisher,
Dean of Men.

G. The Duties of the Dean of Men

Sometime ago an interesting article on the various and often curious duties of a dean of men appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. This article was written by Fred H. Turner, Dean of Men, University of Illinois. As the work of the dean of men deals often directly with living conditions, scholastic standing, and activities of men students, the writer felt that insertions from the above mentioned article would be appropriate at this place.

In general Dean Turner says:

"The dean of men has a curious job. He never knows what will come next, but he may rest assured that it will come, and that it will be something different. The economic uncertainty of the times has increased the problems of the students, and it has come to be understood by most undergraduates that the dean has been provided to help in the solving of student problems. There is much in the work that is sad and much that leaves one heavy-hearted. There is, fortunately, much that is pleasant and much that has a humorous side. If one cannot appreciate the humor in a situation, he should never attempt to be a dean of men. "It would get him down," as the undergraduate would say."

Among the toughest cases the dean has encountered are those of identification of unconscious or deceased students. He must be with the student who must have an operation and whose family is far away. Another type of case which sometimes arises is that which calls the dean to the jail.

"Students are sometimes unfortunate enough to get themselves entangled with the law, and when they do, either they or their friends call for help.

"Petty thieving by students probably gets more of them into trouble with the law than any other offense. Not that it is vicious stealing, but it is foolish and dangerous. The last case I ran into involved four students on their way home from a movie; they saw a painted sign, which they decided they would take home and use for a room decoration. Unfortunately for them, an officer saw them tearing down the sign and apprehended them, and they were locked up. The sign was replaced and they were fined and released. It is not unexpected that in such a large crowd of students a few run into trouble with the police at times. Bad checks, stealing, traffic violations, and that sort of thing make up the main run of such cases, but the number is small. A case of this kind involving a student almost always means that the dean is drawn into the matter in an effort to get it settled."

"During the past two years, personal finances have been among the most serious individual student problems. Most deans of men have to deal with student loans, and we have been fortunate in securing funds from private individuals from which small emergency loans can be made. Most of these go for emergencies in the matter of board and room, but an occasional case comes up which has a different aspect and considerable human interest. For example, there was Allen, who wanted to get enough money to allow himself five dollars a month for fruit and milk. It turned out that he was working at a hot-dog stand and he found that hot-dog sandwiches for breakfast, lunch and dinner were not only monotonous but not well balanced."
'But,' he said, 'if I can get five dollars a month extra, I can buy apples, oranges and milk, and get along fine!'

The fraternities receive consideration:

"It is interesting to meet the many freshmen who contemplate joining fraternities, and to hear their questions. Their hardest question is: 'Which is the best fraternity?' We have about eighty, and it would be hard to say which one is the best, for the real question is: 'Which one is the best for the individual concerned?' Freshmen are quite intelligent in their questions about individual houses, and want to know about the history, the financial and scholastic standing, and the rating of houses. Their questions must be answered honestly, and oftentimes discreetly. The dean must have a world of information at ready command if he is to answer such questions intelligently.

"I find it equally interesting to discuss fraternity problems with fraternity presidents. Depressed times have made new problems for most fraternity presidents, and never a day goes by that some president or other officer does not come in to discuss his affairs. The most common problem at the present time is how to keep the house budget balanced, but many other questions need to be answered, as, for example: How can we improve our scholarship? How can we control a group of sophomores who go on a rampage every time a question of house policy comes up? Where can we get three or four new pledges? How can we get better cooperation in the house? How can we eliminate certain cliques which have arisen within the house?

"Fraternities have done fine work in most colleges, but they are, unquestionably, on trial, just as every other institution is on trial at the present time."

The article discusses the problems of the rooming house, which portion the writer has included in chapter III. Many other problems are discussed in the article, too numerous to mention here.¹

H. National Association of Deans and Advisers of Men

The 13th Annual Conference of the National Association of Deans and Advisers of Men met at Columbus, Ohio, on April 27, 28 and 29 of this year.

The meeting was opened by President Rightmore of the Ohio State University who explained that Ohio State had no dean of men until five years ago, and since then the school has found a dean of men so valuable that today it has a dean and two assistants working full time.

The question of permitting the use of beer in the fraternities and rooming houses of students was discussed at considerable length. A vote was taken to see whether the use of beer should be permitted. The result was that a large majority voted that beer should be discountenanced.

A good deal of attention was given as to how to reduce expenses in fraternity houses. For instance, Beloit College has eighty per cent. of the men living in national fraternities.

The general opinion seemed to be that loans given to men students should be reserved for juniors and seniors who have been making a success of their college work, rather than given to freshmen or even to sophomores.

Deans present reported a distinct movement away from the practice of having class scraps and the enforcement by the sophomores of the wearing of the green cap by the freshman.
The interest in the meeting is shown by the attendance of about fifty deans of men from every part of the country.
