Interim athletic director named; search announced

Angie Lansing, assistant athletics director for business operations and senior women's administrator, has been named interim director of intercollegiate athletics at Indiana State University, university President Daniel J. Bradley announced today.

"I am pleased that Angie has accepted my request to serve as the interim director. I am confident in her ability to provide leadership for this important part of the university as we launch a national search for Ron Prettyman's replacement," Bradley said. Lansing will assume her interim leadership role on Jan. 4.

Prettyman is leaving Indiana State to become managing director of championships and alliances at the NCAA. A new director of athletics is expected to be named before the end of the spring semester.

The university has engaged Parker Executive Search to assist with the search process, Bradley indicated. Daniel Parker, vice president and managing director of the sports division of the firm and an associate, Jaleesa Rhoden, will work with the search committee to help build a pool of qualified candidates. The committee will be chaired by Diann McKee, senior vice president for finance and administration.

The firm's representatives will be on campus on Jan. 8 to meet with the search committee. The position description will be shared when finalized.

Faculty, staff, alumni and community members may submit nominations to:
