Summer day camp program available for dependents of ISU faculty, staff, students

ISU students, faculty and staff in need of quality summer day care for school-aged children and dependents are invited to register their children for the Community School of the Arts summer day camp program. The camps are fun, week-long immersions into various themes, which will include art, music, theater, games and more. Camps are full-day. All materials are provided unless otherwise specified. Campers can register for one week or all nine.

- The camps are designed for beginning to intermediate levels, so students don't need prior experience.

- Classes, lunch and breaks are fully supervised by CSA instructors and staff. Instructors are ISU faculty, staff and students.

"(Elonda Ervin), Indiana State University's executive director of multicultural services and programs, is also a volunteer with the recently created Vigo County Mutual Aid: COVID-19 response, which serves Vigo County and surrounding areas.

- All fitness sessions are taught or supervised by instructors and are designed for children at all fitness levels.

The program is scheduled to begin June 1 and runs for nine weeks through July 31. Registration is $120 per week for the full-day program and $75 per week for half-days. To register for the camp go here.

To help facilitate a safe environment, the Community School of the Arts has established a number of safety measures and will follow guidance for child care and schools from the Centers for Disease Control. Additional information about COVID-19 precautions is available on the CSA website.
