Cooksey receives Physician Sanctuary Award

ISU alum Dr. Jenalee Cooksey, general surgeon at IU Health West Hospital, was honored with the hospital's Physician Sanctuary Award.

“The award is meant to honor physicians who work to provide the best possible patient experience while working closely with fellow physicians and team members,” according to the hospital's Facebook post. “Dr. Cooksey is recognized for regularly going the extra mile in patient care or discharge. She is always happy to chat with fellow physicians about patients or see a new consult, no matter how busy her day has been.”

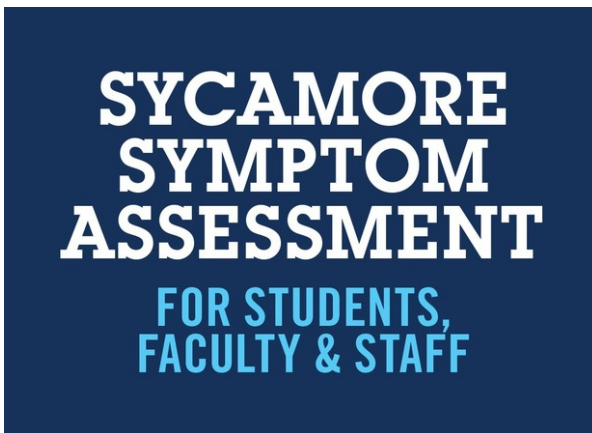

One nomination reads: “I wanted to recognize Dr. Cooksey for last night. I had a patient who had a strangulated abdominal wall hernia. They were not a surgical candidate at all. Dr. Cooksey actually came into the hospital at 2:30 am to help me try to reduce the hernia. It was above and beyond what I expected.”

Cooksey graduated from ISU in 2010 with a bachelor's degree in Liberal Studies and a chemistry minor. She was a recipient of the Rural Health Scholarship.
