

Welcome

I would like to begin by first thanking all of those individuals who have so graciously assisted me in both the scholarly and technical tasks involved in creating this publication.

It is my hope that as this project develops and matures it will become apparent that your trust and support will not have been in vain.

I see this journal as a meeting place for both established and beginning scholars who are seeking to engage in a conversation that is not often found in the mainstream of criminology, criminal justice or offender treatment.